

Invitation to Apply Tohoku University International Doctoral Program in Engineering, Information Sciences and Environmental Studies

Deadline: February 3, 2012

The Graduate School of Engineering, the Graduate School of Information Sciences and the Graduate School of Environmental Studies are pleased to announce the Tohoku University International Doctoral Program in Engineering, Information Sciences and Environmental Studies with elective courses in English and possible financial support for overseas students with outstanding scholastic ability.

The Program was launched in 2001 through the financial support of the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science, and Technology (Monbukagakusho) and is now its 11th year of activities. We would now like to invite students to apply for commencement in 2012 for the autumn semester beginning in October 1, 2012.

Doctoral students at Tohoku University enjoy some of the best experimental facilities in the world and study alongside distinguished faculty and associates to develop creative and original research that is published in highly reputed international journals.

A total of 25 students are admitted per year into the five course groups:

- Group A: Environmental Engineering*
- Group B: Information and Communications*
- Group C: Medical Engineering*
- Group D: Energy*
- Group E: Materials*

Lectures in English are arranged in various areas of concentration. Research supervision may be in English or in Japanese depending on the candidate's ability. Students may also attend lectures given in Japanese to fulfill their requirements.

Up to 12 students with outstanding scholastic ability will be awarded Monbukagakusho Scholarships which are offered as support by Monbukagakusho.

Candidates should submit the necessary materials so that they arrive no later than February 3, 2012. Applicants will be notified of the results of preliminary selection around the end of April 2012. Final results of the selection authorized by Monbukagakusho will be announced by July 2012. Please obtain application forms from your college office or the home page address listed below.
